Social and Personal

THE big society events of this week so far have been the three brilliant concerts given in the City Auditorium, the audiences including not only the music-loving public, but nearly all of fashionable society. The evening concerts were full dress affairs, and the audiences made a brilliant array with the beautiful gowns worn by the women.

Henry W. Anderson, of 412 West Franklin Street, will have as his guests for several days the Belglan Minister and Countess de Ruisscret, of Washington. Mr. Anderson's enter-tainments are notable affairs, and some very handsome functions will be given for his guests during their stay. Mr. Anderson's guests will remain in Rich-mond from Friday morning until Tues-day.

The central committee of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities met yesterday at 11 A. M. in the rooms of the Virginia Historical Society, with Mrs. J. Taylor Ellyson in the chair.

Mrs. Ellyson announced that a letter had been written by Mrs. J. Enders Robinson at her request, expressing regret at the burning of the Williamsburg courthouse, and the hope that it would be restored according to the plan of the original architect, supposed to have been ad pted from an old design by Sir Christopher Wren.

Ars. William Bentley, the treasurer, announced the payment of interest on the halance of the Powder Horn note in the bank at Williamsburg. On motion of Mrs. E. V. Valentine, a bill for James River guide books, provided for the approaching Jamestown excursion, on May 13, was directed paid. An invitation from Mrs. Harrison of Brandon, asking members of the excursion to stop at Brandon, was read and acknowledged with appreciation.

The date of the general meeting in June was left to the decision of the president and the corresponding secretary, the usual date, June 10, being found impracticable.

Mrs. Egbert Leigh, chairman of the ways and means committee, reported a committee meeting held April 25, at which it was decided to employ Miss Stewart, of Middletown, N. Y., to train dancers for a kirmess that will be given under the joint auspices of the A. P. V. A. and the Associated Charities, during Easter week of 1912. The entertainment will be brilliant in character and will be held in the City Auditorium, with four performances.

Mrs. E. V. Valentine reported the following names of those to whom life certificates had been sent: William Aloxander, Mrs. F. W. Scott, Mrs. M. C. Patterson, Mrs. B. P. Taliaferro, Thomas F. Ryan, Mrs. S. W. Travers, Mrs. R. T. Huntor, chairman of the annual excursion to Jamestown, announced that tickets were ready for distribution and would be placed at the Virginia Historical Society, the Rosemary Library and other points of interest. Also that many of the Staterous the organization are asked to be presen.

The meeting of the Know Your City Study Class, which was postponed from yesterday to this afternoon, will be held in the Sunday school room of the Seventh Street Christian Church from 5:15 to 6:15 P. M. Miss Katherine Ricks will be chairman of the meeting for this afternoon, and the subject up for discussion will be "Betterment Work."

This he refused to do, and being armed with a shotgun he attempted to fire on the party. Plummet, seeing that the lives of himself and the other were in danger, fired on Holdway. The entire lead entered the left side of his head, and Holdway died on Saturday afternoon, at 5 o'clock.

The coroner's inquest was conducted on Saturday, afternoon, at 5 o'clock, as county coroner, and Justice M. C. Fields, as county coroner, and Justice M. C. Hash, and Vaught and Flummer were arrested, for conspiring to murder Holdway. They appeared before Ball Commissioner Padgett to-day, and Flummer was bonded in the sum of $2,000, and Vaught, being unable to give bond, was placed in jall. He will be given dime novels for some time, which gave him the idea that he might make a success of cracking safes. He had robbed a safe at Major and secured $40 the night before, which money he had on his person when captured. The week before he had committed a burglary at Flat Ridge. He confided to Arthur Vaught the success he had met with on other occasions, and told him what a great thing they could make of it if they would organize a gang. Vaught declined, but Holdway came to him the second time, then the third, and insisted that he join the gang. Vaught finally told him he would, so as to gain his confidence. Vaught when went to Phipps, who informed the officers, and they met at Philips's store. Phipps had in the meantime taken out all his money, and left the safe unlocked.
